UNIVERSITY HIGH SCHOOL'S GOLDEN ANNIVERSARY

The completion of the first Louisiana State University educational department in Baton Rouge on December 6, 1915, marked the commencement of a new episode in the university's diary of growth. Originally, the college was called the Louisiana State Seminary of Learning, and classes were first held on January 2, 1880, at a site about three miles from Alexandria.

When the seminary was destroyed by fire in 1889, new accommodations were secured in Baton Rouge in the building which is presently the Louisiana State School for the Deaf. The State Legislature changed the university's name to Louisiana State University in 1876, in 1877 the university merged with the already established Agricultural and Mechanical College. In 1896, the school established new quarters in the buildings occupied by the United States Army Post in Baton Rouge, known as the 'Pentagon.'

The L.S.U. Board of Supervisors in 1913 obtained a grant of forty thousand dollars from the Peabody Educational Fund to build an education department and demonstration school. This fund was raised in 1886 to provide grants to eleven southern states for aiding education by the building of demonstration schools, each to be named Peabody Demonstration High School. In 1915, George Peabody Hall, housing high school and college classrooms, became a part of the 'Pentagon' campus. The facilities were inadequate for college and high school students and the proper training of student teachers.

George Peabody Hall on the present site.

At the beginning of the 1925-26 session, the university transferred its activities to its present site. A new George Peabody Hall, built on the new campus, improved the conditions considerably. The high school finished in the new Peabody Hall, and new clubs, sports and social activities were added. Gradually, a seventh grade was added, and in 1936, the elementary grades were added. With the rapid advancement of the school and the growth of the Education Department, the new building became inadequate. Dean E. E. Roberts, Dean of the Department of Education, saw the need for expansion and appealed to the Board of Supervisors for a solution to the problem. Mainly through his efforts and those of L.S.U. President William E. Batcher, the Board of Supervisors appointed a committee to consider plans for a new laboratory school and a College of Education.

In May, 1930, approximately twelve acres of land at the corner of Dalrymple and East Campus Drives were allotted as a permanent site for the proposed school, while the College of Education was to remain in Peabody Hall. Construction began in 1951 and was completed in 1953. The new school was accompanied by a different name, the Louisiana State University Laboratory School, fondly called University High School by its students.
With the addition of the gym in 1955, the high school lacked only a few facilities necessary to a complete laboratory school. The language lab was added in 1962. When the auditorium, equipped with hand and music rooms, was completed in 1965, University High became one of the most complete laboratory schools in the country. For fifty years students have entered and left the doors of the school, not realizing that they were making its history and that they were each partly the cause for the changes in the school’s life.

University High faces the future looking upward, and, young at heart, it never ceases growth towards the further benefit of its students. We of the 1965 C.I. B. staff challenge each student to ponder this statement, to appreciate the timeless relationship between school and student. Though the buildings, principals, teachers, and students have changed, the main goal of the school remains permanent: that is, the education and guidance of the student was, is, and will forever be the most important function of University High School. This purpose is expressed in the traditional “Alma Mater” each time a student sings it and means what he is singing.

ALMA MATER
This is our Alma Mater,
This is our school;
We will be loyal,
We will be true.
Now we are with thee, now we are near;
Still in the future.
We will love you.

Forward you send us,
Forward we go;
We will remember,
We will know;
Your halls inspire us,
Your halls we bless;
And in our hearts we hold thee;

UHS

1. Tiger Town—Hoppers, the Varsity Theater, the Bookstores, the Shopping Center.
2. Music and Dramatic Arts Building—former years, the site of U-High Graduations.
3. LSU Swimming Pool.
4. LSU Library.
5. Mike the Tiger’s Cage, LSU Track, “U-High Track Teams” place of practice.
6. Alex Box Stadium—use in the fall for U-High home games.
7. Tiger Stadium.
8. The Union Building.
9. The Dairy Building, where many U-Highers have engaged in advanced biological research.
10. The Coliseum, with its basketball games, rodeos, and livestock shows.
11. The back road to Highland Road or Stanford.
12. Dalrymple Drive, and the way home for many U-High students.
