“Breakfast with Socrates” by Robert Rowland Smith

- Students should read all chapters except chapters 11 and 17. We will be using the book as a basis of how to look at situations in every-day life. It will be the anchor text for the entire course. Students should be looking for real-life connections as they read the book that can be used to explain how and why they acted. Students are encouraged to annotate the book while they read.